

LifeCenter Northwest's

Cooper PJ Project

Cooper Rice was only 2 years old when he gave the gift of life through organ donation. Prior to his recovery, his family provided the LifeCenter Northwest team with a pair of his favorite pajamas to dress him in upon completion. It was a simple request with a profound impact.

Putting pajamas on as a child is a comfortable transition to bedtime. Our experience with Cooper inspired us to provide the same cozy transition for all of our littlest donors. Now, all donors ages five and younger will be dressed in donated sleepwear after organ or tissue recovery. We hope this program will help bring everyone involved in these difficult cases some comfort and provide one more way to honor these beautiful young people and their amazing legacy.

To learn more about this project visit: www.lcnw.org/stories/cooper

